

Building castles in the sky is the actual perfect crime. Our next racket was your standard second-story job, which makes it about a hundred stories shorter. A word of advice. If you ever think about kidnapping an actual kid, don't do it. You'll get no sympathy from anyone, even if the parents aren't famous. Whoever went down for it was obviously going to fry. Which indeed he did. I told them so many times that I had to keep my hands clean, but I ended up doing amateur carpentry wearing kid leather gloves. Those gloves were a total write off. And the [ ] didn't look much better. Okay, here we are. It would be prudent to behave like this is a routine visit. Just do the usual business. Or if I'm lucky, less of it.
