What follows is a section of the transcript of a recent autopsy.

"Subject was found in a back alley, riddled with bullets. Subject was identified as a gas line repair man who had been reported missing about a week ago. Heh. Ideal job, if you can get it. Sure pays better than this gig."

"Bullet one extracted from left temple. Star-shaped entry wound."

plink

"Bullet two located in crook of right elbow. It would have been all over for this guy already."

plink

"Bullet three lodged in subject's 8th rib, left side. That would have been bad times for sure."

plink

"Bullet four just missed the spine, glancing off to the subject's right."

plink

"Bullet five was dead center on the spine."

plink

"Tissue samples of bullet entry wounds have been properly filed."

You probably shouldn't eat right after swimming, either.
Or during swimming, for that matter.

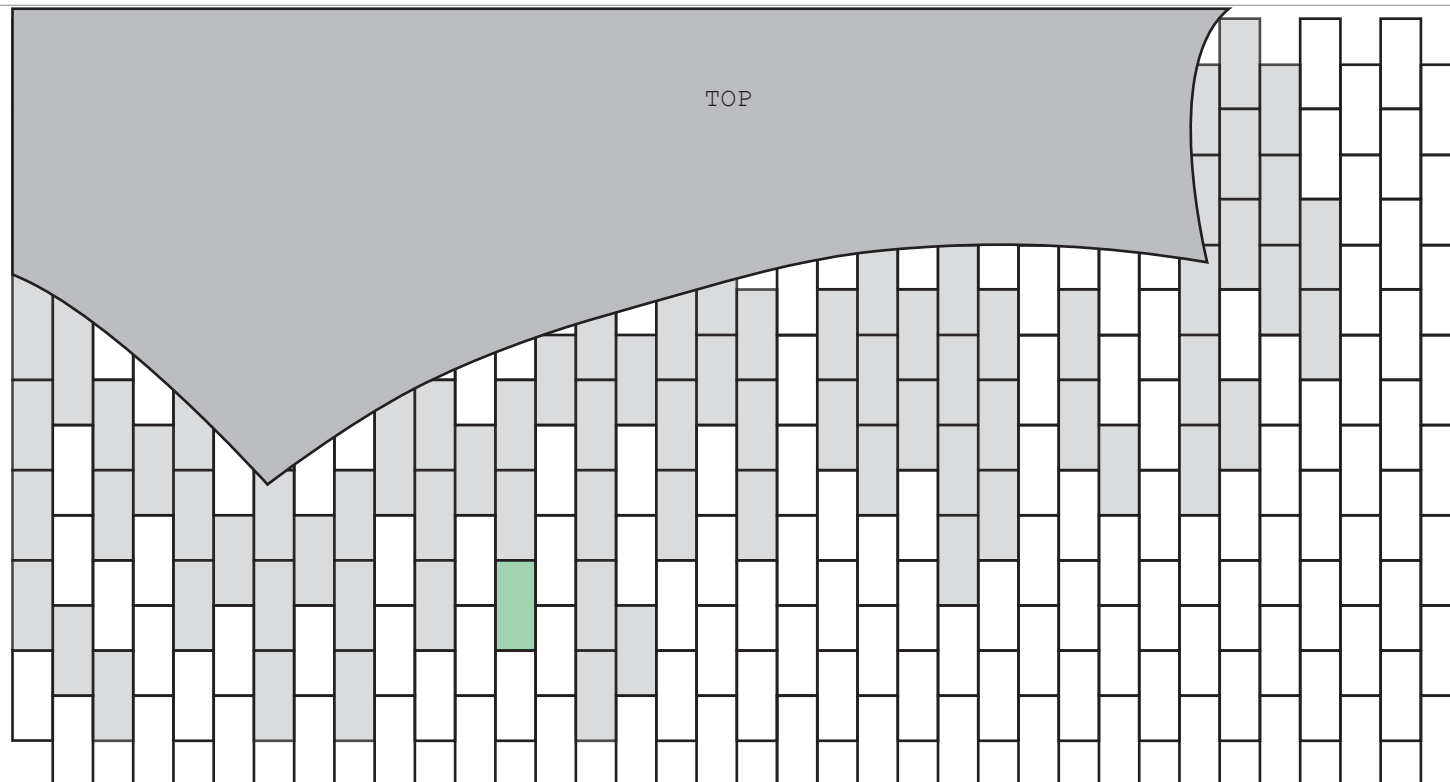

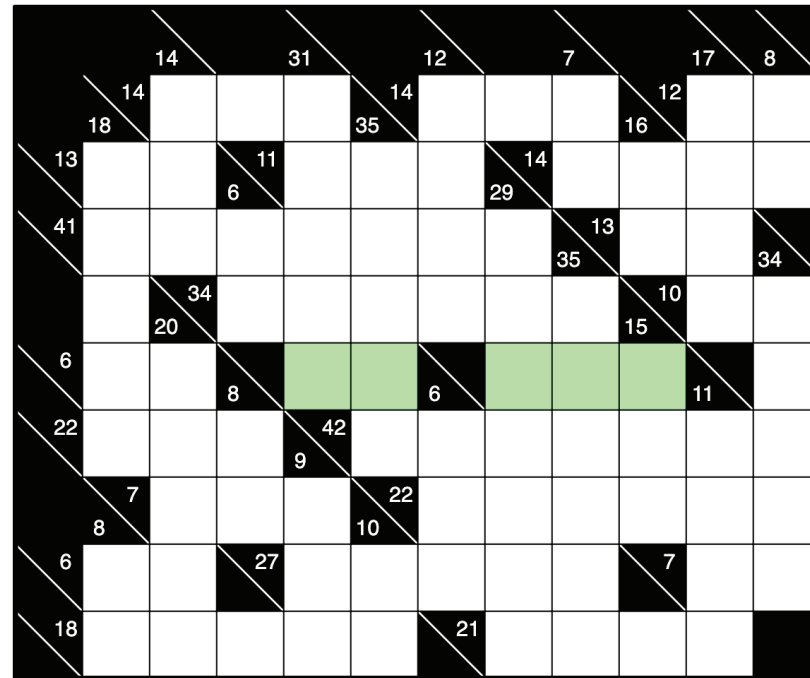

... .. please don't eat this.

"Are you still with me? Good. One last rule: the rest is simply color coded. Carve any blocks with colors in them that are also characters in either Fraggle Rock or The Rocky Horror Picture Show. On the other hand, if you find a color in a Rolling Stones song: what did I tell you, don't mess with the Rolling Stones! Carve the block directly to the left instead."

"B-b-b-b-but what was the inscription?" the Apprentice stammered.

The Stonemason sighed in exasperation. Was there any hope that this Apprentice would get even one thing right?

"You know the rules," the Stonemason yelled at the quivering blob of Apprentice-shaped anxiety.

"Don't mess with the Rolling Stones! Don't touch any block containing the title of one of their songs. But if that title also includes a birthstone, carve all eight blocks surrounding it. And if a title contains a word that is also the original artist of a song in Rock of Ages... don't touch that block or any in the column above it.

"Carve the mountains. The Rocky Mountains, that is. Carve any of the top 25 tallest peaks you find, unless they are also the name of a president of the United States, in which case you should leave them alone.

"Speaking of presidents, though: if you find a block with the name of a president who was also painted by Norman Rockwell for a cover of the Saturday Evening Post, carve it. But don't touch any other Norman Rockwell covers.

"Don't carve any of Touchstone Pictures' top 25 grossing films in the US -- but do carve the three stones in the column directly above them.

"Carve blocks with stone fruit. If you find any blocks that contain the anagram of a stone fruit, though, that's messy; don't touch it or the block directly below it.

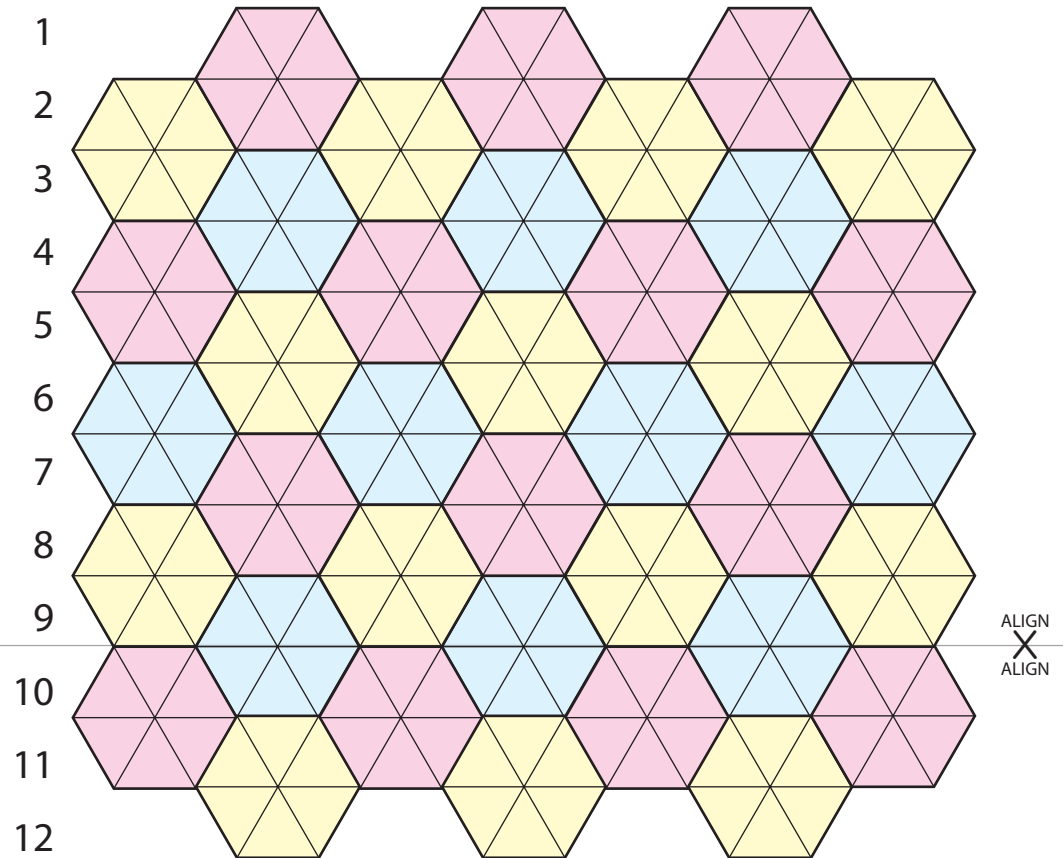

"I'm not finished! Turn this page over!

The Photographer

My inspiration came to me in flashes.
It started with a moment of uninterrupted self-reflection. Can I count on myself to remember who I am?

I triangulated and set off, thinking
of two different ways to say hello.

I kept going the same direction,
stopping to consider why we try to put ourselves in boxes.

I took two steps south and turned left, passing at least four different species before stopping to chase my own tail.

Continuing in the same direction, I turned left when I reached an animal
I certainly wouldn't forget, but soon stopped dead in my tracks -- this furry thing was terrifying!

I could see the red and green dragons from there and headed that way, but turned to the right and carried on instead of stopping there. Of course,
I always admire something that flies.

It was just one step to two good friends: so heartwarming!

I followed that bright idea and went all the way past the end zone. I turned right immediately after it,
and eventually stopped just after passing a new crossbreed to admire my favorite animal.

I took a single hop and then one step northeast from there. I never thought these two countries were so close to each other! I took a sharp left and after passing three different things with wings, paused to consider: did all of them share the same cap?

If I take a step back and consider all the people I've encountered, I'll be able to see the best one to look up to.

The Dead Drop

The Dead Drop

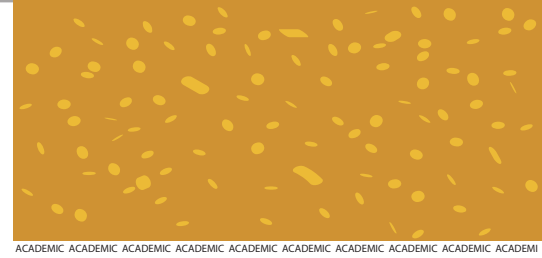

The security camera trained on the dead drop was on Fritz last night, so Billie had to rely on logic and observation to piece together the order the informants visited in.

- The Coroner was disgusted to find the dead drop sopping wet and took some time to dry it off before leaving.
- The Academic and Photographer are always found together. If the Academic fills in more answers about sports, they leap ahead and visit before the Photographer. If the Academic fills in more answers about the Ig Nobel prizes, they hang back in embarrassment and visit after the Photographer.
- If the Actor has showcased The Taming of the Shrew, then they accept authority and immediately follow the Police Officer. If the Actor has not showcased this play, then they follow their most obvious partner, the Poet.
- The Stonemason loves football and mentioned being perplexed that the agent immediately before them referenced some sort of bird instead of the biggest football game in the United States.
- If the Bartender only works north of the river, then the next two agents start with the same letter. If the Bartender works both north and south of the river, then the next two agents start with letters from different halves of the alphabet, in some order.
- The Coroner is from Israel, and the Photographer happens to be from the adjacent bunny-beloved country as encountered in the Photographer's journey. Their places in line are the same as the current time zones of their respective countries, if UTC +0 would be first in line.
- The Logician tends to overcomplicate things. If the two unchecked squares in the bottom row of the Logician's puzzle are both even, then the three informants with unique first letter titles visited in alphabetical order. If those two squares are both odd, then they visited in reverse alphabetical order. If one square is even and one is odd, then the Logician rushes in to be first in line and doesn't notice what order anyone else visits in.
